CHEERS FOR DR. WEISSE.

HE LECTURES TO HIS OLD CLASS AGAIN.

THEY FLOCK TO THE CARNEGIE LABORATORY-AN ADDRESS OF WELCOME. The sidewalk in front of the Carnegie Laboratory in East Twenty-sixth-st, was crowded last evening with medical students who were elbowing their way for a chance to get in to hear the first lecture on anatomy given there by Professor Fanouli D. Weisse since his resignation from the professorship of practical and surgical anatomy of the University Medical Cellege. "Joe" Standish, a big, muscular man, stood at the door and "showed fight" when any one who could not show a matriculation licket attempted to enter. Many students who had forgotten to bring their tickets thought to make up for the loss by carrying heavily bound medical volumes under their arms, but "Joe" was immovable and would not let them in. They went away grumbling. When Professor Welsse arrived, however, the "word of command" was relaxed, and reporters, for whom the jamitor had been lying in wait especially, were with others permitted to

The New-York College of Dentistry has hired the argo hall in the Laboratory for lectures on anatomy by Dr. Weisse twice a week, on Wednesdays and Fritave, and the first of the series was begun last even Students from the various colleges in the city invited, and they came in sufficient numbers to the hall. More than 100 of them were from the University Medical College, while large delegations also flocked in from Bellevue Hospital Medical College, the New-York College of College, the New-York College of Phycicions and Surgeons and the Homeopathic Medical College. When Professor Weisse entered the students jumped to their feet and cheered and cheered again. It was only when their voices gave out that they became quiet and that the Professor was enabled to begin his lecture on practical anatomy, which lasted one hour and twenty minutes, Dr. Weisse remarking in a half-playful, half-sarcastic mood "that there are no gongs here, so if I step a little while beyond the stion time, which is one hour, I am certain you will hear with me." This observation was received with a deafening outburst of applause.

Dr. James Walsh, who had charge of the dis-ting-room and was the embalmer in the University College and who resigned when Profess Weisse did, was present and acted as his assistant His appearance, too, was greeted with a burst of apwho was the demonstrator under Professor Weisse.

fore beginning the lecture proper the Professor whose face was wreathed in smiles and who kept bowing for fully two minutes in response to the warm greeting with which he was received, said, in re-ply to a unanimous call for "a speech," "a "Gentlemen, the only speech I have to make to you this evening outside of that which you are especially here to listen to is that I am very glad to see you all, and full of gratitude for the warmth and enthuslasm with which you have grocted me. Before beginning my remarks this evening allow me to offer you an explanation of this present occasion. New-York College of Dentistry has hired this hall for the purpose of continuing my demo of anatomy, (Applause.) I, as incumbent of the chair of anatomy, have heretofore always allowed my demonstrations to be free to all medical students who have desired to attend. (Prolonged applause.) This demonstration is no exception. (Applause.) The students of the New York College of leatistry have extended an invitation to all medical students to be present. They and I will be always glad to see those of you who choose to attend." (Continued ap-

The Professor then went on with his lecture. There are twenty-six tables which engage five men each in the dissecting-room of the University Medical College and they are usually all filled. One of the students informed a reporter of The Tribane, however, that there were only two men there last evening, the others having gone to hear the lecture by Professor Wetase.

A RUSSIAN TALKS OF RUSSIA.

PRINCESS MARTHE ENGELITCHOFF BEGINS SERIES OF LECTURES.

Princess Massha Engelitchoff gave the first of her series of locial son Russia in the pariors of Miss Pierce's Schubi for Young Ladies, No. 50 West Forty-eighth-st., yesterday afternoon. Aside from the interesting matter which it contained, the delivered in a captivating way, showing a perfect delivered in a captivating way, showing a perfect to the could be seen to the could be seen to the could of English. The freshness and with which the story was told could originality with which the story was fold could only come from an intimate personal knowledge of the subject. The lecture of yesterday being introductory, dealt more in generalities regarding Russia, giving a brief outline of the subjects to be covered hereafter. Yet many interesting points were touched about the heavier of the real points were touched. upon, the beauty of the row of palaces along the qua-of St. Petersburg, the brilliant military pageants constantly to be seen in its streets and proand the pleasures of the winter season in the northern capital. Charming bits of detail regarding the life of the Czar and Czarina, both at Gatchina and the home palace in St. Petersburg, differed far from the accounts which people are accustomed to hear.

The succeeding lectures—the first to be held next Wednesday-will deal more especially with the social, educational and religious phases Russian life. Princess Engelitchoff, who now at the Belvedere Hotel, is a member of one of the highest families in the Empire, recorded in the three famous books of the nobility which go back to the CUTTING OFF THE POLICE WIRES.

TROUBLE CAUSED BY REMOVING "DEAD" POLES -INSPECTOR WILLIAMS INTERFERES.

A gang of workmen employed by Alexander Busbee, who has a contract from the Bureau of En cumbrances for the removal of "dead" telegraph poles in the city, yesterday took down several poles in East Houston-st. belonging to the Western Union Com pany that had become useless in consequence of the wires having been put underground. On the north side of Houston-atl, near the Bowery, stood a large pole on which were stretched two police telegraph The work was in charge of Thomas Ahear No. 315 East Thirty-seventh-st., a lineman. George Reade, of the Police Telegraph Department, discovered Ahearn in the act of cutting the police wires, and warned him to leave them alone, as the cutting of the wires would have the effect of shutting off communi wires would have the effect of shutting off communication between Police Headquarters and nearly half of the precincts uptown and on the east side of the city.

Reade hastened to the central office and told Assistant Superintendent Breman what was being done. While he was gone the men cut away the pole at the bottom preparatory to taking it down. Officer Schick was sent to step the men. He told Ahearn to leave the pole alone, when Ahearn assaulted him and tore his coat. Schick placed him under arrest and brought him to Headquarters. Several officers were sent to the place with orders from Inspector Williams to let no one interfere with the pole or wires. Ahearn was locked up for assaulting the officer.

Contractor Ensbee was sent for and explained that the trouble was caused through the failure to notify the Police Department to remove their wires. He furnished ball for Ahearn, who was released. The pole was sixty feet high, and as it had been almost entirely chopped away at the bottom it was considered dangerous. Last evening the pelice wires were removed and strung on the roof of the elevated station.

CHARGES OF RATE CUTTING IN CHICAGO.

COMMISSIONS AND REBATES GIVEN-THE INTER-STATE BOARD TO INVESTIGATE THE MATTER.

Chleago, Jan. 23 (Special).-Mutual charges Wer renewed to-day by the roads running between Chicago and Kansas City. The Wabash filed an additional and Ransas City. The wands here a solution affidavit against the Alton, charging it with cutling the rate from Chicago to St. Louis. The Norwalk, Ohio, agent of the Wabash bought an order for a ticket of the Alton agent in Norwalk for $7. General Passenger Agent Enstis, of the Purlington, claims that the Rock Island is still cutting rates by the payment of commissions. Said he:

"The temporary agreement pending the presidents" meeting specifies that rates shall not be cut. What is the difference whother it is cut by paying commissions, by a side cut or by giving up big round dollars ! A cut of any kind is contrary to the agreement. The Rock Island acknowledged that it paid a commission of $1 a ticket. Consequently it is guilty of cutting the regular tariff."

A local paper says: "When Interstate Commercial Commissioners Cooley and Morrison, of the Inter state Commerce Commission, a few weeks ago laid down the law to the managers of the various roads tentring in this city they expected that their recommendations would be complied with. They have learned, however, that the condition of affairs has but little improved since then and that scalpers still continue to sell tickets at less rates than they are soft at regular ticket offices, and they have, there-fore, concluded to make another trip to this city and for, concluded to make another trip to this city and to tdopt measures that will compel the railroads to comply with the law. They are expected to arrive here on Monday and will at once proceed with their investigate. The Commissioners also propose thoroughly to investigate the charges against the lowa roads for discriminating against the packing house interests in this city by making rates on live hogs from the Misseuri Elver higher than the rates on packing house products."

FLORIDA FEARING MORE YELLOW FEVER.

FLORIDA FEARING MORE YELLOW FEVER.

From The Atlanta Constitution.

Our phenomenally mild winter is bothering our southern health officials. It is helieved by many that Florida with lave another yellow fever plague this year, and its neighboring States should be prepared to act sensibly and harmoniously. Much can be done to prevent a vanie next summer by taking the proper precaudions. Last summer people were too badly scared to know what they were doing. Refugees rusined pell util in every direction, to be fleeced in one place and met with shotguns in another. One day there would be an exedus from Jacksonville, and the next us one was permitted to leave the city. Everything was in confusion. Sick people died in camps not properly equipped, and female refugees were at the mirey of negroes and white tramps. Tellow Jack may not come this year, but it will do no harm to get eady for him.

THE STOCK OF KENNEBEC ICE ON HAND. Augusta (Me.) dispatch to The Boston Herald.

Ice operations on the Kennebee are retarded by the emarkable mildness of the measur, and the question whether the ice crop is to be a failure is common here. Last year at this time ice cutting was in full bleat, and a splendid crop was harvested. It proved, however, a bad year for the icemen, who found little or no money in the business. The shipments during the year were only some 600,000 tons, a failing off of some 100,000 tons or more, as compared with the previous year. Over 250,000 tons were left over, and are in the houses to-day. There is scarredly a company but has more or less of the cold comfort of last winter's crop on hand.

BLLIOTT F. SHEPARD MAKES AN ADDRESS. Elliott F. Shepard last night addressed a meeting of the Lafayette Republican Club, at No. 455 Sixth-ave. He reviewed the history of the Republican party, and predicted brighter things for it when Mr. Harrison shall have been inaugurated. He recommended reforms in the man gement of municipal polities. The Republican party should continue to nominate trustworthy men for loca offices, he said, and should also give them a platform o principles on which to make their canvass. If they had a banner around which to rally they could overthrow the Demograts. Mahlon Chance made a short address als

A SUBLIME MOMENT IN A PRIZE SPIGHT. Bishop Potter in Scribner's Magazine.

Bishop Potter in Scribner's Magazine.

Nothing is clearer than that rivalry and competition are not merely actual but inevitable elements of human life. And therefore is it our wisdom not to pretend that they do not exist, and seven less to pretend that there is something so naughty in them that they ought not to exist, and, least of all, to pretend that though they are naughty, they are nevertheless necessary, and we must compete and strive and stringgle to excel and outwit our neighbor just as hard at we can, only taking care, if possible, not to let anybody see what we are doing, or auspect in us the competitive spirit. In a word, this is just one of those questions which wants to be ventilated with a strong brease of candid and courageous common-sense, and there can be no fitter moment for opening the windows and letting such a breeze blow through than just now. Let us understand, then, that competition—a strife to excel, nay, if you choose, downright rivalry—has a just and rightful place in the plan of any human life. A prize light is probably the most disgusting spectacle on earth, but it has in it just one moment which very nearly approaches the sublime; and that is when the combatants shake hands with each other and exchange that salitation as old as the classic arena, "may the best man win." It is the equitable thing that the best man should win. When we turn to the most august and eventual conflict which human history receives, we find it described as the winning of a prize, the reaching of a goal, the conquest of an adversary. Of course it is possible to suppose such a thing as a life without rivalries and competitions, and to look forward to a time when, smid other conditions, they will be at once needless and incongruous, but in such a life as ours in now—in a life, that is to say, which so plainly has disciptine and education for its end—to take all rivalry and competition out of it would be to rob it of one of the mightiest and most wholesome agencies for the encobing of human character.

IMPROVED POPULAR LITERARY TASTR IMPROVED POPULAR LITERARY TASES.

From The Toledo Commercial.

The officers of the public library at Columbus state that there has been a marked improvement during the last year in the character of the books drawn from the library—that light literature has been quite extensively superseded by books of a more instructive structure. We believe that is also true of the Toledo public library. The managers have been laboring to bring about that result, and are stratified to know that their efforts have met with a good degree of success.

MAXIMS OF THE PRESS.

DISCUSSED BY MR. MURAT HALSTEAD.

ADDRESS BEFORE THE WISCONSIN PRESS ASSO-CIATION-MR. DANA'S MAXIMS REVIEWED. Madison, Wis., Jan. 23.-The members of the Wisconsin Press Association to-day listened to an address by Mr. Murat Halstead, of Cincinnati, in which Mr. Dana's famous newspaper maxims were reviewed and commented upon. The address was in part as fol-

If there is to be profit in our coming together, any merit or possible usefulness in speaking, it will be in plain dealing with things as they are. It was not long ago epigrammatically said, in a connection that iong ago epigrammarically sain, in a connection that while it had a political aspect need not now be re-garded as a partisan utterance—the remark was made by the citizen chosen to be the next President of the Unifed States—that certain gentlemen were devoted. to maxims rather than to markets. Both the maxims and the markets need to be studied. I shall recite and annotate some of the maxims declared by the tinguished editor, Mr. Charles A. Dana. Said he: "Get the news, get all the news, and nothing but the news." Now, if we always could know what the news is, if we could be at once quick, precise and omprehensive about it, that would be a send-off. Is news identified with legislation and diplomacy, casual-ties, fires, wars, personalities—with gossip theatrical, gossip of the courts, rumors from Washington, Paris, Berlin, London ! What news is there, or is there not, in an idea, a sentiment, a poem, in a garden, or an orchard red or white with blossoms, or a field glittering with the silver tasselling of the corn, or the golden billows of the wheat-or is it wafted in the airs of summer, or whirled in the storms of winter? Whoever yet knew just what "all the news" was? It is telling too much to say we must get "all the news and nothing but the news." No sheet would be sufficient to contain it.

2. "Copy nothing from another publication without perfect credit." Sometimes it is the highest flattery not to give credit, and we have known information credited to a newspaper that the journal itself would gladly have discredited. It is not always flattery not to give credit, and we have known information credited to a newspaper that the journal itself would giadly have discredited. It is not always a compliment to fasten all the facts upon a newspaper, or the false show of truth that may have misled the able editor. "Perfect credit" would seen to be an exact phrase, but when we come to analysis we find it is very broad, loses outline and grows vague and cloudy. Fortunately this maxim does not go so far as to declare that you must not publish intelligence without giving "perfect" authority for it.

3. "Never print an interview without the knowledge and consent of the party interviewed." This is to be construed conventionally, and it is not certain that it would always be popular with public men, who find the interview convenient in making informal appearances, often more important than official proclamations. The best interviewing, that which is most pleasing to him who is interviewed, and valuable to the newspaper, and that gives the greatest charm to the art of the interviewer, is the appearintly inoccent report of the seemingly unintentional conversation of the subtle gentlema who is giving the information.

4. "Never print a paid advertisement as news matier. Let every advertisement appear as an advertisement; no salling under false colors." Once upon a time I sacrificed many dollars in an endeavor to establish that great principle, and have receded from it, yieldings to the material manifestation of general judgment. Mr. George W. Childis, Mr. James Gordon femet, Mr. George W. Childis, Mr. James Gordon femet, Mr. George W. Childis, Mr. James Gordon femet, Mr. George W. Childs, Mr. James Gordon femet, Mr. George W. Fifth maxim: "Never attack the weak or defence Fifth maxim: "Never stack the weak or defence less, either by argument, by invective or by ridiculumless there is some absolute public necessity for a daily." There can never be an absolute public necessity for attacking the weak or the defenceless. Helthem, defend them always! If there is any surmaxim of duty it is to aid the weak and defend the defenceless; and even if they are down because the sins have found them out, we need not affect the sins have found them out, we need not affect the world that takes hold on lodder things to afford a least the piteous help of human charity to the broke and the poor.

world that takes hold on loftier things to afford at least the piteous help of human charity to the broken and the piteous help of human charity to the broken and the poor.

I have no critical observation to make of the other maxims declared by Mr. Dana. They are good, and I cordially sympathize with the zeventh: "Support your party, if you have one. But do not think all the good men are in it, and all the bad ones outside of it." One who gave a good many years to independent journalism—preached it, and strove to practise it—held that the true position of the journalist was outside and above pariles—that the greater the men of the party, the greater the necessity for hostile watchfolness, and for bolding them in restraint by healthful severifies: that the more certain the party was good, the clearer the duty to inform it of its faults—one with such an experience may speak of this theory with freedom. The difficulty is that professional and dominating independence inclines to the habit of fault-finding, and leaves the fault-finder hanging rather to the fringes, or wandering on the edges of affairs, than taking them by the handle or the helm and guiding the course of events. It is the better way to go with parties, to be devoted to them, on the inside of them, to make the heat of them, stick to them, maintaining their discipline, asserting the principles that they represent. One must find his party according to his principles, or it is not proper citizenship or fair journalism to maintain it—not honest to assert it. If the party will go unicachably, irreclaimably wrong, get out of it and try another.

What is the office, what is the dignity of the press? What is its authority? What shall be its ruling motives, its higher accomplishments? The press does not form, it reflects public opinion. It does not make, it partakes of the character of the majority is not found in the formal phrases that politicians prepare to suit the eccasion. It is the character of the party that should be taken into account when its merits

A letter was received by Secretary Burus, of the Park Department, yesterday from Dr. L. E. Callija, of Monterey, Mex., offering a collection of mummies to the city. These mummies, the writer said, were exduring the early Spanish occupation of Mexico, by the monks for the imprisonment and torture of prisoner of the Inquisition. The remains are, he says, in good preservation. The communication was sent by Mr. Burns to Professor Bickmore, of the Museum of Natural History.

WASHINGTON AT OYSTER BAY.

WASHINGTON AT OYSTER BAY.

Prom The Oyster Bay Pilot

There was an aged woman still living in New-York a few years since who had a distinct remembrance of seeing General Washington as he passed her father's door, in Cold Spring, L. L. on that "tour," as he calls it in his diary. Mrs. Sarah Mead, this venerable link between that pleasant episode in the life of the first President of the United States and our time, lived to the ripe old age of ninety-eight, and, aithough much enfeabled, retained in her mind a vivid impression of that interesting incident of her childhood. Her account tailles precisely with several particulars given by Washington himself respecting that journey from Brooklyn to Brookhaven, which was made in his private carriage and with but few attendants. It was on his return route, and on his way from Huntington to Gyster Bay, that she saw him, which, as we learn from his diary, was on Friday, April 23, 1790. The name of the General's stopping place sho recalled without difficulty, which we subsequently verified on turning to the diary, that records it as "the house of a Mr. Youngs private and very neat and decent), where we ledged." But another equally well authenticated fact, frequently reheared to Mrs. Mead, by her friend, Mrs. Temperance Jackson, a much older person, who was present at Youngs's on that eventful evening to help in getting up a grand supper for Washington, was the wear too good, arrived, he stepped into the sitting room, and simply asked the hostess if she could furnish him and his company with a dish of "mush and milk." "When this order was announced in the kitchen," said the old lady, "you should have seen those hegroes; they were struck dumb with astonishment," a silence, however, which was no doubt shortly relieved by the noisy merriment common to the race.

DEATH OF SELINA DOLARO.

Selina Dolare, well known in opera bouffe, died at 6:30 o'clock last evening at her home, No. 365 West Twenty-third-st. She had been in a decline for three rears, and her friends had expected her death long ago, but her remarkable pluck seemed to keep her up, and time and again she rallied from the edge of the grave. She had been down town on Saturday, but an hour after her return home she had a hemorrhage, which was followed by two others. Even from this stroke she rallied on Tuesday, and it was hoped she would be about again, but these hopes proved fal-

Mme, Dolaro was an English Jewess, and her first success was made in the concert halls of London. Afterward she received a systematic musical education, and achieved a success in several of Offenbach's operas. She was to sing "Carmen" in English, and she was manager of the Haymarket Theatre. There she was the first to produce Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial by Jury," but her efforts as a manager did not prove She first came to the United States in 1877, as member of the Mapleson Grand Opera troupe, and appeared at the Academy of Music in the role of Carmen expecting to repeat her London successes. He voice, however, was not of sufficient volume to fi the Academy, and her career as a singer in grand opera came to an end. In 1880 she joined a comic opera troupe which came to grief somewhere out West and she returned to New-York. In the spring of 1881 she was singing the title role in the opera of "Olivette" at the Bijou Theatre as the prima de of the Acme Opera company. In the summer of that year she revisited London and also took a trip to Paris to visit Audran, the composer of "Olivette," who wrote a comic opera for her under the title The Snake Charmer." The piece proved unsuccessful, and her next essay in a short season of vandeville at Bijou Theatre in the spring of 1882. These also fa and, excepting an occasional appearance at a ben for some needy member of the profession, she did come before the public until three years ago, we she appeared in the same cast as Minnie Maddern an adaptation of Sardou's "Agnes." career as an actress.

Nime Dolaro was a woman of many accomplish ments and great energy, and during her long illness did a great deal of literary work. She wrote "lust line," which was produced at the New Park Theatry did a great deal of literary work. She wrote "Justine," which was produced at the New Park Theatre some years ago, and she also wrote "In the Fashion," which was afterward produced at Wallack's Theatre under the title of "Fashion." About a year ago she published "Mes Amours," which achieved some reputation. Recently she has written a novel called "Bella Demonia," which will be published in "Lippincott's Magazine" in March. She was married to a Spanish Jew when she was fourteen years old, but had not lived with him for many years. She leaves two sons and two daughters. A son and a daughter are now playing in Mrs. Langtry's company.

SHOOTING HIMSELF ON A TRAIN. ATTEMPTED SUICIDE OF A YOUNG NEW-YORKER-OTHERS WHO MADE AWAY WITH THEMSELVES.

Boston, Jan. 23 (Special).—Just as the New-York train on the Boston and Alhany road was drawing into the Boston station at 10:30 o'clock to-night, passengers in the smoking car were startled by the report of a pistol shot. Investigation showed that D. E. Barrett, twenty-three years of age, of No. 1,041 Parkave. New York, had shot himself fatally. The public ambulance was called and he was removed to the hospital. A newspaper was found in his pocket, and on the margin was written with pencil: "Take care of Sadie," and in another place, "Thomas H. Barrett, No. 1,041 Park-ave., New-York." Another place was written: "Do not think of me never. I am insane." The young man is not expected to live through the

The Westinghouse and United States Companies.

The Westinghouse and United States Companies.

It is announced that an agreement has been made between The Westinghouse Electric Company and the United States Electric Lighting Company, whereby the interests of the two companies shall hereafter be conducted for mutual benefit both in the manufacture and sale of electrical apparatus in the management and litigation of their patents.

The United States Company is one of the oldest electrica manufacturing companies, and has a large and growing business in are and incandescent lighting and plating apparatus, motors, and alternating current apparatus, a large factory in Newark, N. J., and many electric light and power plants in Newark.

motors, and alternating current apparatus, a large actory in Newark, N. J., and many clottric light and power plants in use.

It holds many strong patents, some of which are fundamental, its inventors having been the earliest in the field of practical electric lighting and transmission of power.

The Westinghouse Company has in two years taken the lead in central station lighting, having 148 stations, with a total capacity of 250,000 let-candle power immps in service. It is the lease of the Consolidated and Sawyer-Man Electric Companies of New York, and has, in addition to its own extensive works in Pritaburg, the lamp factories of the Consolidated Company in New York and Pittaburg.

It is the owner of the Waterhouse Electric Company of Hartford, Conn., and the Tesla Electric Light and Manufacturing Company of Habway, N. J., as well as of the Tesla motor pa'ents.

It was the first to introduce the alternating current method of electrical distribution and owns several hundred patents and inventions relating thereto, many of which are claimed to be fundamential.

The new combination bas a manufacturing capacity of over 15,000 lamps a day, and the two companies own and control about 760 patents on electrical inventions, which they propose to litigate solively for joint benefit.

The combination represents a united capital of about 510,000,000.

It is understood that the Bate decision relating to foreign patents, just rendered by the U. S. Supreme Court, is regarded by these companies to be greatly to their day-trage in strength-oming their own position as well as that of patents in general.
